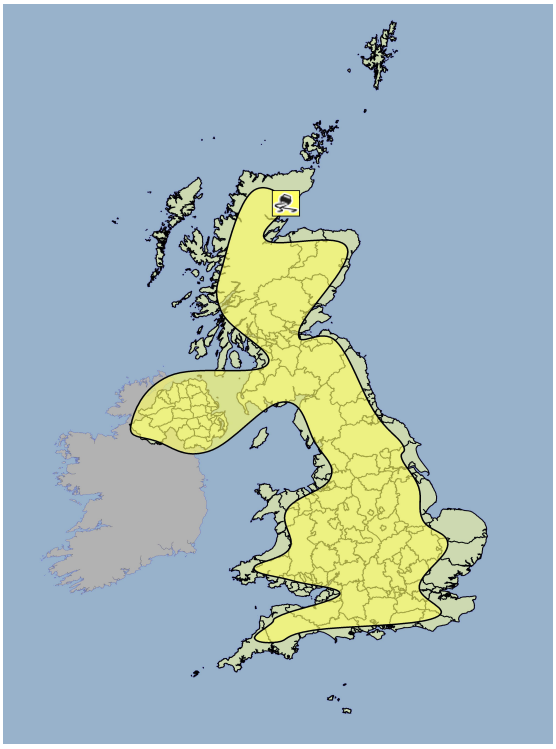
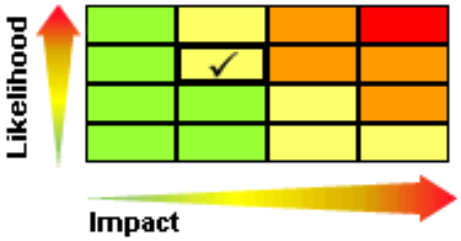
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
England and Wales join Scotland and Northern Ireland in seeing colder conditions overnight. Late showers, wintry over hills, and water running over roads in some areas, will increase the risk of ice.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 20:00 on Sat, 15th Feb 2014 until 10:00 on Sun, 16th Feb 2014

As skies clear and winds ease, icy stretches are expected to form in parts of Scotland later this evening and in some other parts before Sunday morning. Additionally higher level routes in Northern Ireland, north Wales, northern England and Scotland may see localised snow cover, chiefly above 250 to 300 metres.

The public should be aware of possible slippery surfaces to start the day on Sunday.
